

Development, from Above & Beyond

a photography project by Borja Santos & Simon Black

Description

Our world is changing, for better and for worse.

Your business wants to make it better,
but this can be hard to communicate.

Video is a powerful tool,
connecting with people like no other medium.

We are two experienced practitioners and recent Harvard graduates.

We use video to connect you to your audience in visual and visceral way.

Your development story is important.

We want to help you tell it.

Who we are

is from the UK and is currently based in New York. He loves travelling and taking photos from the air, land, and sea to show how our world is changing. His work can be seen here.

Simon recently graduated with an MPA in International Development (MPA/ID) from Harvard. He currently works for the World Bank, helping developing countries mitigate and adapt to climate change through economic reform. He has also worked as a macroeconomist for the British government, a financial consultant to banks in London, and as a microfinance consultant in Bangladesh and the Philippines.

is from Spain and has ten years of development experience. He also works as a photojournalist, telling stories about important social issues. His work can be seen here.

Borja also recently graduated with an MPA/ID from Harvard. He is currently a consultant and adjunct professor of international development at IE University. He is a public policy practitioner having worked in evaluation for the World Bank in Perú, in economic growth for Harvard's CID in Sri Lanka, in resilience and humanitarian action with the United Nations in Ethiopia and Ecuador, and in project management for the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
